Despite a late rally this afternoon the S&P/ASX 200 finished 0.1% lower at 5517 points, with the materials and energy sectors dragging down other parts of the market.

Gold and iron ore stocks were some of the biggest losers, with Beadell Resources off 10.6% to 25c and Atlas Iron down 7.5% to 24.5c.

The losses followed more gloomy forecasts for the iron ore sector, which is expected to continue struggling against lower prices.

At the top of the industry BHP Billiton fell 1.5% to $A34.17 and Rio Tinto lost 1.2% to $60.51.

Things were more positive at the smaller end of the scale, however, with a number of explorers moving ahead on positive announcements.

One good move came from Latin Resources, which jumped 10% to 3.3c following further copper drilling results from its Ilo Este project in Peru.

Metals of Africa also surged 30.1% to 12.5c after it announced plans to start drilling at the Montepuez graphite project in Mozambique.

Elsewhere, Cobre Montana leapt 15% to 4.6c after securing an option over advanced lithium processing technologies from Perth-based Strategic Metallurgy.

Uranium explorer Aura Energy also continued its run, gaining another 22.6% to 3.8c.

One of the day's most notable gains came from Papua New Guinea-focused Goldminex Resources, which rocketed 228.6% to 2.3c after announcing a change in its strategic direction.

The company outlined plans to move out of mining and transform into a technology and e-learning business.
